ABOUT HATSUNE MIKU

In 2007, Crypton Future Media, Inc. developed a singing voice synthesizer software. It was released in August of that year, and Hatsune Miku was the name given to the character drawn on the box art. After the release of the software, countless amateur creators used Hatsune Miku's 'voice' to create their own music. They then posted their work online, and increased the popularity of the product.

This boom of creativity wasn't just limited to music, however. A variety of illustrations and videos based on Hatsune Miku's image have, with Crypton's blessing, been spread around the internet as well. As a result of this, Hatsune Miku became an incredibly popular virtual idol not only in Japan but all around the world. There have even been full Hatsune Miku live concerts, making full use of 3D projecting technology. These concerts have been performed both domestically in Japan and internationally as well. Other examples of character-based Vocaloid software produced by Crypton Future Media, Inc. include Kagamine Rin, Kagamine Len, Megurine Luka, Meiko, and Kaito.
